JADE Jagger, daughter of Rolling Stones rocker Sir Mick, has been signed to design housing developments with Melbourne property development company, R. Corporation.

Jagger, daughter of Sir Mick's ex-wife Bianca, has been signed to architecture guru Philippe Starck's offshoot London-based design company, Yoo.

R. Corporation has the licence for Yoo Australia and represents Mr Starck on a variety of projects in Australia.

The striking brunette party girl will be thrown into the residential property design and development industry as creative director. Jagger, who successfully designs jewellery for Garrard, the Queen's bauble maker, is also working on a range of furniture as part of the Yoo project.

R. Corporation chief executive officer Andrew

Rettig said the partnership with Mr Starck had already been phenomenally successful.

The company has integrated Mr Starck's concepts into the Tribeca home and retail development in East Melbourne.

"This announcement presents us with an opportunity to find suitable projects to showcase Yoo's collaboration with Jagger, whose innovative designs have created a stir around the world," Mr Rettig said.

The partnership grew around the dinner table between Jagger, Rettig and Starck on the Spanish party island of Ibiza.

There are about 4000 Yoo apartments worldwide from Moscow to Phuket to Boston.
